

NEW MEXICO SLAM

Leaping Lizards!

Weighing in at 6'2" and 240 pounds, Iggy is one of the largest lizards around. But that doesn't stop him from putting on a show at New Mexico Slam Basketball games.

As with most professional basketball mascots, Iggy's costume needed to provide a wide range of mobility. At games he can be found rappeling from the rafters or dunking a basketball.

Iggy's face was custom sculpted and set onto an adjustable hockey helmet. The muscle suit was constructed using a snake-skin printed lycra that was dyed to match the team colors. The tail is secured with an interior belt to help it withstand the tugging of children or unruly fans.

Iggy has quickly become a favorite in Albuquerque, New Mexico, through his performances on the court as well as his service in the community.

Costume design by Alan Anderson. Head construction by Lu Smith. Body construction by Pat Cook and Mohamed Sharif-Khahf Mudir.
